

Latin America Crystal Ball User Conference Attracts Customers and Partners From Around the Region

Denver, March 13, 2007-- Decisioneering®, Inc., an innovator of software and services for risk analysis and optimization, is pleased to announce the success of its first Latin America Crystal Ball® User Conference. The Latin America Crystal Ball User Conference held March 8-9, 2007, in Cartagena, Colombia, drew more than 60 attendees from a broad range of industries, companies and countries.

The Latin America Crystal Ball User Conference featured 18 different sessions and workshops from speakers hailing from Venezuela, Ecuador, Argentina and Colombia. The speakers, Crystal Ball and risk analysis experts, focused on the importance of using Monte Carlo simulation, optimization and real options in their company's projects and day-to-day business.

"This event was created to give our Latin American customers the opportunity to work with colleagues in their field who have successfully applied Crystal Ball to their work," said Juan Ortiz, Crystal Ball senior account manager for Latin America. "As with our other forums and conferences, this event successfully brought our community of partners and customers together so that they could help each other to fully realize all of the benefits of using Crystal Ball software."

Decisioneering produces dozens of live events every year, from free online seminars and public workshops to user forums and conferences. The educational events bring together users to continue their Crystal Ball and risk analysis education. Interacting with other professionals builds a stronger, lasting community that helps users apply Crystal Ball more effectively.
